ABSTRACT

This project's purpose is to do a comparative study of a neural network approaches in breast tumor recognition. The aim is to gauge the performance of forward feeding neural network on the numerical dataset. Since it is a classification problem, metrics used to assess the performance of all models are accuracy score and classification report.

The project uses deep neural network to detect the tumor is benign or malignant and display out message.